				<hr/>
				$116 00

CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

Bedding and washing for 9½ months,	-	-	-	19 00
Wood, (half the quantity necessary to furnish one room)	-	-	-	5 00
Lights,	-	-	-	6 00
Incidental Expenses,	-	-	-	15 00
Total,	-	-	-	$161 00

In the item of incidental expenses, we include text books, and a few articles of furniture which a student is under the necessity of purchasing when he first occupies a room in college. The amount specified may not cover these expenses the first year; we have given what we conceive to be a fair average throughout the collegiate course.

The amount necessary for clothing and pocket money, must depend upon parents. Here the Faculty can exercise no control, nor even a useful supervision. More however than is barely necessary for purposes of students, will prove hurtful.

Persons who are preparing for college, are requested to pay special attention to the course of study. Applicants for admission, who have made the requisite progress in the Latin and Greek Languages, are often wholly ignorant of Arithmetic; and those who are qualified, in other respects, for the Sophomore Class, are often found unacquainted with Algebra. They are thus retarded a whole year in their course, by a deficiency which diligent application for a few weeks or months would have supplied, as no student can be received who is not well versed in all the studies requisite for the standing to which he aspires. The Preparatory School is designed exclusively for students who are fitting for College, and no others are admitted. This arrangement offers peculiar advantages to persons having that object in view.

The College discipline is mild and parental, but it will not tolerate indolence or vice. It is a fundamental principle that no idle, disorderly or immoral student can be permitted to remain in the Institution. If suitable advice and admonition do not produce speedy reformation, the delinquent will be returned to his parents. Offences which require exemplary punishment, will be followed with prompt dismissal. In all other cases the parent will be notified, and the student privately removed with the least possible detriment to his character and prospects.
